

Corona notwithstanding: Fette Compacting gives 16 trainees the opportunity to kick off their careers

Schwarzenbek, August 12, 2021. Life recently began in earnest for 16 young people as they commenced their training at Fette Compacting. The company is hiring even during the pandemic and is promoting young talent in the form of suitable training offers.

Just how joyful the move from school to the world of work can be is demonstrated by an idea at the Fette Compacting Training Department: trainee cutting machine operators, mechatronics engineers, industrial engineers, electrical engineers, industrial merchants, technical product designers, and industrial mechanics started off by introducing themselves in a short film which they also produced. "There were no limits to content or creativity – the main thing was it was diverse and had a personal touch," explains Bärbel Brüggmann (Training and Education).

Training at Fette Compacting is just as individual as the introductory week: from classic apprenticeships through dual courses of study to courses with integrated apprenticeships, there is an appropriate training pathway for practically everyone. "As a leading international supplier of integrated solutions for the industrial manufacture of tablets and filling of capsules, training is a central element of our HR strategy. We currently employ more than 49 trainees and students. And they can choose between six different courses of study and up to eight different apprenticeship trades," emphasizes Philipp Brakel (Head of Global HR).
